Joanna Fleming packed up her bags to go to London to help raise her son's children. She found him living in a poor hovel in an attic and was astounded. She stayed as she had planned but the money ran out and events went bad. Through desperation the son's life is brought to a reckoning point. This story is allegorical of Christ's sacrifice for salvation. About the Author SARAH SMITH 1832 ndash 1911 was born in Wellington England. She had the good fortune of being able to read books from her father's bookshop a printer of evangelical literature. Her mother was a strong evangelical but died when Sarah was
